The tabernacle was filled with old and young at both sessions, and the pointed assertions and denials made by the head of the church and the head of the church and the head of the improvement association caused a profound stir among the Mormons who were present.

Aside from this incident the three

Aside from this incident, the three sessions of the day were held without special event, and were all well at-tended. The addresses were all directed especially towards the young peo-ple, and bore notes of warning to guide them in their future.

Mr. Lyman's Charge.

It was at the close of the morning session that President Lyman made his assertions. The services opened with a hymn by the congregation, after which prayer was offered by General Superintendent Junius F. Wells. Short addresses were then delivered by President Joseph F. Smith, Maria Y. Dougall, President Hannah Grover of Fremont stake, Junius Wells, the latter speaking on what mutual im-provement has done for the south, and

President Nebeker of Nebo stake. Mr. Lyman was called upon for a short address, and after calling attention to sins with which people are be-set, declared that the curse of the Mormon church was obscenity, and not in-temperance. He maintained that people are not judged by what they do, but by what they think, and urged parents not to allow their minds to dwell on evil things, because, as he claimed. the thoughts of the parent were very often those of the child. Mr. Lyman passed on to another topic without ex-plaining or qualifying his assertions in any way, and the effect of his bold statements upon the audience was evident. The session came to a close, though, without anyone else referring

The musical programme of the session embraced a solo by Mr. Fred Graham, "Eyes That Are Weary," and one by Miss Luella Ferrin, 'Just as I Am

President Smith Takes Issue.

After the opening of the afternoon session by song and prayer by Apostle Hyrum Smith. President Josepeh E. Smith arose to address the audience and promptly took occasion to recall reference to them he was rather re served in his expressions, but still made it perfectly clear to all that he did not think they were warranted or true

President Smith first enumerated a number of vices, such as intemperance, profanity, infidelity and immorality, classifying them under the head of obscenity. He then declared that Mr. Lyman's statement that obscenity was the curse of the church was untrue. He declared that if it existed among the Mormons at all it was not universally the case, not among the people at large, but if it existed at all, it did so to a limited degree only, and was the exception, not the rule.

He said that vice was due more to lack of thought than anything else. and warned parents to be careful of their sayings and actions, especially before their children. He cautioned them against taking the name of the Lord in vain and of speaking evil about friends or acquaintances.

With much feeling President Smith denounced drunkenness and the use of tobacco. He dwelt long on the sins of immorality of any kind. The latter one in the sight of God, and was in the same category as murder, and would be punished as severely.

Old Officers Elected.

After the address the officers of the Y. M. and Y. L. M. I. A. were re-elected by unanimous vote to serve another year. The chair ong the anthem, "Un fold, Ye Portals Everlasting," and solos were rendered by Miss Emma Lucy Cates and John Robinson. An organ solo was rendered by Professor Henry E. Glles. Elder J. G. Grant in great length read the and, in conclusion, the speaker told of the ridiculously low prices of articles in that country and the menial wages paid there.

The services opened by the choir rendering "Ye Simple Souls That Stray." after which Rudger Clawson invoked divine blessing. Next was the singing of the hymn, "Guide Us, Oh, Theu Great Jehovah."
An address by Miss Josephine experiences missionary in the interests of the cause in Europe, and a quartette composed of Messrs.
